5	I think that the best stage of life is when you are old enough to look at what you have done in your life and understand that you are proud of it and have nothing else to be sorry about. Tony's way of life is the one which I would be very pleased ^{happy} to have. It is idillic and calm and everyone including Tony is pleased with it. Meeting your friends, going on a walk every every morning, see a nice landscape every time that you wake up. Everything about it makes me feel like I would be over the moon every day of my life if I lived like that if I lived like that.

20	The pandemic illuminated unpleasant truths about our society. One of them is ethnic inequalities in modern Britain. The information about greater risk of dying from Covid among people in minority groups lead to debate about ethnic health inequality. The shocking statistics about mental health and birth which showed the health problems of black people were ignored by NHS which lead to higher death level in this minority group. NHS failings seem to matter more than those of other institutions. It needs to reform as the Met police and justice system does. The question now is will the government that ignored the previous reports ^{such as} do something about it. NHS can only be called national if it treats equally every community that makes up the nation. 3
