Задания 16-20

Вариант 3

Прочитайте приведенный ниже текст и выполните задания № 16–№ 20 после него. Для Вашего удобства каждое пятое предложение в тексте пронумеровано.

(1) The room was full of deep shadows. Brantain sat in one of these shadows. The obscurity lent him courage to keep his eyes fastened as ardently as he liked upon the girl who sat in the firelight.

She had a certain fine, rich coloring that belongs to the healthy brune type. (5) They were talking of indifferent things which plainly were not the things that occupied their thoughts. For two weeks past he had sought her society eagerly and persistently. She was confidently waiting for him to declare himself and she meant to accept him. The rather unattractive Brantain was enormously rich; and she liked and required the entourage which wealth could give her.

Suddenly the door opened, and a young man entered. (10) A stride or two brought him to her side, and bending over her chair he pressed an ardent, lingering kiss upon her lips.

Brantain slowly arose; and the newcomer stood between them, a little amusement and some defiance struggling with the confusion in his face.

“I believe,” stammered Brantain, “I see that I have stayed too long. I must wish you good-by.”

“Hang me if I saw him sitting there, Nattie! I know it’s deuced awkward for you. (15) But I hope you’ll forgive me. Why, what’s the matter?”

“What do you mean by entering the house without ringing?”

“I came in with your brother, as I often do,” he answered coldly, in self-justification. “He went upstairs, and I came in here hoping to find you. (20) But do say that you forgive me, Nathalie,” he entreated, softening.

“Forgive you! You don’t know what you are talking about. It depends upon—a good deal whether I ever forgive you.”

At that next reception she approached Brantain with a delicious frankness of manner when she saw him there.

(25) “Will you let me speak to you a moment or two, Mr. Brantain?” she asked with an engaging but perturbed smile. When she took his arm and walked away with him, a ray of hope mingled with the almost comical misery of his expression. She was apparently very outspoken.

“Mr. Brantain, I have been very uncomfortable, almost miserable since that little encounter the other afternoon. When I thought how you might have misinterpreted it, and believed things”—hope was plainly gaining the ascendancy over misery in Brantain’s round, guileless face. (30) “Of course, I do want you to understand that Mr. Harvy is an intimate friend of long standing. Why, we have always been like cousins—like brother and sister, I may say. She was almost weeping, “but it makes so much difference to me what you think of—of me.” Her voice had grown very low and agitated. The misery had all disappeared from Brantain’s face.

(35) They walked slowly to the very end of a long, dim corridor. When they turned to retrace their steps, Brantain’s face was radiant and hers was triumphant.
