5	Learning more about animal perception can be very useful for people. For example, it would be incredible if turtles' inbuilt compasses could teach us to feel the magnetic field too. This ability helps baby turtles to swim despite never being in the water. I think that animal perception can teach people to become closer to nature.

16	1. It is false T. When its mirrored eye opens to the universe in 2028, the ELT will be by far the most capable such instrument ever built. 2. F. When it comes to the creation of great instruments of knowledge the countries of Europe have a singular gift. 3. F. Large Hadron Collider requires remarkable engineering. 4. T. Fundamental physical inquiries matter and the conventions and councils Europe has built up to serve them - mostly specific to particular fields, and not part of the EU institutions - do so admirably. 5. F. There is no magic model here for others to copy.
17	1. ELT is an Extremely Large Telescope. It is located in Chile's Atacama Desert Desert. 2. Europe is called old and timid. 3. It is a common endeavour and spoke both to Europe's past cultural pre-eminence and to its future as a family of nations. 4. It makes all the parts of the EU institutions to provide conditions for you to have create a marvel. 5. It appeared in a particular post-war period.

20	The Extremely Large Telescope ^{is one of} the most ambitious achievements of Europe. European countries are considered to be unwilling to construct something. However, Europe is the best leader in creating instruments of knowledge. For example, CERN's Large Hadron Collider is an impressive construction. It is remarkable that Europe also works together with America, China, Japan and beyond.
