Chat GPT, which is an example of cutting edge AI technology, is learning at a shockingly fast pace. This AI is now able to write essays and mimic a human in a conversation. Many people debated over the risks and benefits of integrating artificial intelligence into our lives, and the most interesting topic of all is the following: 'Chat GPT may lead to the downfall of education and critical thinking.' There are several points of view on this.

Due to its accessibility, Chat GPT is now used by students and scholars all over the world for writing all kinds of creative tasks. It is believed that students will lose their ability to think critically if they stop putting any effort into their education.

I can totally agree with this idea, but I think it extends ~~to~~ only to students who didn't have any will to learn in the first place.

There are also people who believe that Chat GPT is a blessing in disguise, which should help people collect, compile and analyse huge amounts of information faster.
~~I also agree~~

I also agree with this ~~statement~~, but only to some extent: those kinds of help would be useful only ^{to} among people who will use it for studying, not cheating.

In my opinion, Chat GPT is likely to become a great educational tool for those, who understand its merit, and the main reason of being unsuccessful for others.
