People these days waste a huge amount of food. In my opinion, a ~~lot~~ lot of us tend to miscalculate just how much ~~we~~ we are able to ~~eat~~ eat in a certain amount of time, so our food often spoils and we have to throw it away. Moreover, sometimes people just get disappointed in how it tastes.

In order to combat this issue, many things can be done on an individual level. For example, if a person has food they know they will not be able to eat, but that has not gone bad yet, they can give it to a family member or a friend.

Same thing with food that tastes bad – just because one person didn't like it doesn't mean everyone else will hate it too. Besides that, there are a ton of recipes online of really nice dishes that are specifically made out of leftovers, as well as a large amount of organizations where you can donate food instead of throwing it away.

Anyone who's passionate about this topic can help the cause by becoming a food waste reduction activist and set up various campaigns themselves. Besides enacting change on an individual level, we can pressure the government to put new laws in place regarding this problem.

20	A good title would be "Hope that keeps you waiting". The character named Juan believed that believing in Mr Baxter's existence was the same the same as believing in hope itself. This title doubles down on that idea. The double entendre is that the family kept waiting because they had hope, while Mr Baxter literally kept them waiting. for them
