5	The biggest benefit of computer-based learning is that AI can act as a model of a real person by communicating with a student. For instance, finding a pen friend for language practice can be dangerous, given that the people you don't know personally can scam you. But it becomes much safer when you opt for an AI companion.

20	Climate change is a serious global problem that causes negative psychological reactions, such as "climate anxiety". The Power Threat Meaning Framework aims to address this issue as a global one too. Its study revealed that climate concerns trigger despair and worries about the future. According to it, the distress requires changes from the government and social support.
