ВАРИАНТ № 2

Overconsumption and waste of food are examples of modern global issues that influence the lives of all people around the world. While the problem of starvation has not yet been solved, tons of normal food are being wasted. What are the reasons, and what measures are to be taken to alter the current situation?

First, large companies' marketing policies are a driving factor in the way how customers make their ~~choices~~ decisions to purchase something. Bright packages, beneficial ~~and~~ offers (e.g., "buy 2 and get 3 ~~more~~ programmes"), intense advertisement – all that lures people into buying more and more.

Second, a typical customer does not understand his or her needs. In post-industrial societies, individuals have lost the feeling of what is necessary and what is not. Therefore, we buy more than we are able to consume simply because we are used to this lifestyle.

To reduce the amount of food we waste, it is recommended that the problem be addressed immediately. To begin with, companies should be made to change their advertising strategies to promote ~~not~~ buyers' understanding of the product and not the idea of purchasing it. Moreover, there should be held a special government campaign to promulgate the idea of responsible ~~consumption~~ consumption among all citizens.

Overall, the issue of food wastage requires meticulous
