Personally, I believe that the nowadays popular tendency to throw away food stems from a different modern phenomenon – overconsumption. The media, having a huge influence on our lives, promote constant consumption not just of food, but also of clothing, health products and even of content online. All of this steals people's money and time, while also polluting the environment. I presume that one of the most effective methods of fighting the urge to purchase more than one needs is to manually lower one's exposure to the overconsumption propaganda – that is, to push oneself to spend less time online. At the same time, one should make an effort to notice the instances when one is on the verge of buying or ordering ~~an~~ an excessive amount and consciously stop. Only by implementing self-control in our daily lives can we combat the alarming food waste trend. Another ~~beneficial~~ beneficial step on the road of improvement is to spread awareness about the problem as far as possible. Pushing more people to engage in the battle against meaningless consumption will most certainly ensure that the rate at which food is wasted every day is significantly slowed. Thus, if we unite our forces in a single worldwide effort, we can eventually mitigate the problem.

16	1) Those who could pay, did. Those who could not brought her butter and cheese, fish, tortillas, eggs, and fiery pepper sauce. 2) Rumor had it that the speculator had gone bankrupt and that the doctor had bought the land from him. Some said she had money of her own... 3) This is just like the fairy stories you used to tell me.
17	1) Dr. Baxter attended to her patients, her daughter went to school, and every evening they both came to the station to wait for Mr. Baxter. 2) Because he saw Dr. Baxter and Charlotte come each evening, hopeful, and to stop believing would be equal to admitting that hope and love they showed by turning up was foolish. 3) ... thin, haggard man. The man was handsome, but gaunt. He walked with the help of a cane.
18	1) very good land for farming 2) went to her patients to help them with their health problems 3) when it's evening 4) didn't matter 5) put his face against the doctor's neck
19	1) notice 2) piece 3) stop 4) thin 5) say goodbye
20	suggested title: "The Fairytale Miracle" In the second to last sentence Mr. Baxter says the place is like the fairy stories he was told, so it's possible to make an allusion to that in the title. The arrival of Mr. Baxter after such a long wait is in itself like a fairytale miracle, so "The Fairytale Miracle" is a rather fitting title.
