ВАРИАНТ № 1

World hunger is arguably one of the most dangerous issues of our modern world. This phenomena is caused by a variety of reasons, such as ground and water pollution, global warming, overpopulation and so on. And so, it must be the responsibility of each and every one of us to combat this issue and help those in need.

We all contribute to global warming: every cigarette, every car ride destroys lives, in the present and in the future. A similar effect takes place regarding pollution - ~~we are~~ willingly or not, we all are a part of the problem. However, undeniably so, the most egregious example of willful ignorance or even straight up malevolent greed are the companies. They took over the entire world and gained a cult-like following. Their directors and board members have amassed unthinkable riches - and almost none of it, if any, is used to combat world hunger or at least lessen the effects their industries have on the world.

But it doesn't mean that nothing can be done. We can still help those in need - by ourselves. It doesn't mean selling all your possessions and donating the money to charities, but if we gave at least one percent of our wages to charity, it might save someone's life.
