5	The biggest benefit of computer-based learning is the ability to monitor and personalize the education process. Measuring the student's knowledge, speed of learning and taking into account personal abilities by using computers allows to customize the learning process and make it more effective. The same results can't be achieved with traditional education.

20	With the climate change causing damage to the environment, people are becoming increasingly more worried about the future. Research shows that the problem is common. A PTMF-informed study explains that all feelings caused by climate change are valid. To fight the distress, people have to acknowledge it as a collective trauma, learn to distract themselves and practice self-care.
