ВАРИАНТ № 1

Usually, when we think about the lack of basic resources, necessarily for survival, third-world countries come to mind. But the problem is much closer to us than we're expecting. Foodless, homeless centers, empty convenient stores, deficits of ~~the~~ certain ~~foods~~ goods is the reality. Though, what is the reason?

The reasons are plenty, starting from a panic ~~one~~ caused by epidemics when ~~the~~ some people buy an ungodly amount of products and don't leave anything for the rest, to the starvation because of a bad harvest. ~~But~~ Although the most popular one is overconsumption when people buy too much food and ^{don't eat} ~~aren't~~ ~~eat~~ it all before the expiration date, resulting in something, that could've been eaten by others, gone to waste.

So, how do we deal with this? The answer is, we encourage them to plan their meals and ~~the~~ write a list of products they'd need. That way ~~the~~ ~~panic~~ shopping for groceries would become easier and people 'd buy less stuff they don't need because they'd be goal-oriented. The other solution is to go through your fridge once a week and checking if everything is still good to eat. If you find something that's close to going bad but you don't feel like eating it or incorporating it in any dish — donate it to the shelter or to a local open canteen. They'll figure out a way to make it eatable.
