The amount of food bought and then simply wasted, usually left to rot and then thrown out, everyday is astronomical. People all over the world contribute to the problem. Today, I would like to dive into the reasons of this phenomenon and suggest how we can deal with it, solving a very prominent modern problem.

I think that the main offenders are large stores and shops. They are businesses, their goal is to earn as much money as possible. To achieve this, they slightly manipulate the customers. They enforce belief that all food products which are not inherently new are all non-suitable for consumption. While there are indeed many such cases, it is blown out of proportion, so people would throw away more and by more.

But how could this be solved? Firstly, we need to educate ourselves on the subject. Knowing a product's real expiration date can greatly help. Secondly, we could also support our local businesses. They get and need much less profit, so they usually do not resort to such tricks.

To sum up, food waste is still a prominent international problem. Humanity has ways

16	1) "Those who could pay, did. Those who could not brought her butter and cheese, fish, tortillas, eggs, and fiery pepper sauce." 2) "Rumor had it the speculator had gone bankrupt and that the doctor had bought the land from him. Some said she had money of her own and would build a great mansion..." 3) "...he'd Mr. Baxter say, 'This is just like the fairy stories you used to tell me.'"
17	1) The doctor worked while her daughter went to school. Both regularly went to the station to wait for Mr. Baxter. 2) If he didn't exist, it would mean that his wife's whole year of waiting, as well as her faith and patience were all for nothing. 3) "The thin, haggard man who got off the train after everyone else. The man was handsome, but blind. He walked with the help of a cane."

Personally, I think that such a name perfectly reflects how surprising the plot's finale was both to the character, specifically Mr. Ramos and Dr. Baxter, and the reader. It also represents the place of events and their in-story comparison to a fairy tale.
