Nowadays despite the general development of the world in various spheres, some regions of our planet still get to face the problem of the lack of food. Some countries are unable to provide the required foods, which leads to a huge amount of people suffering and dying from starvation. In the following text I will share my ideas on causes and possible solutions to ~~these~~ this problem.

Actually, the diversity of climates on the Earth is the reason why some regions can't provide their residents with food. For example, african countries do not have an opportunity to grow any crops due to their heat. Consequently, few millions of people are just left nothing to eat as even if their countries could afford all ~~that~~, the products made would cost an arm and a leg. The most convenient solution to this problem would be an export of the products that are genetically modified and resistant to the challenging conditions. It would also help to stop waste of food ~~which is~~ which is caused by the low demand on this problems in Europe.

In conclusion, the problem of the lack of food is massive, yet able to be solved.
