ВАРИАНТ № 1

In our fast-paced world, where personal comfort and career accomplishments are more valued than altruistic temptations ~~and morality~~, more and more people are getting ~~at~~ ^{to} the brink of complete poverty and hunger. Food consumption is too intense, which cannot positively affect some remoted regions ~~(with inadequate food supply)~~. Why is it so and what can we do about it?

The main reason of this problem lies in simple inequality of provision available to people in different regions. For instance, the amount of ^{food} factories and farms located in the outskirts of London is twice bigger than in a secluded village somewhere in South Africa. Consequently, the delivery of food to these regions is diverse, which causes unequal consumption and hunger.

Another ~~quite obvious~~ ^{a common or crises} reason is inflation. Countries with a gradual inflation food ~~is~~ ^{state of} becomes less accessible than in countries with normal economies. While people in one city can ~~freely~~ buy any ~~swanky~~ dish for a song, others have to give away their whole wage for a morsel. Climate changes may aggravate the situation ^{too}: floods and droughts frequently leave people with ~~no~~ ^{out} crops ~~at the end of the~~ ^{harvest} season.

Fortunately, our society is powerful enough to confront this disaster ^{by}. Elaborating special projects and voluntary events, we could foster the development of food industry in remoted areas. Governmental organisations could also help by ~~facilitating~~ new farming techniques and creating more pleasant environment for producing and food.

To sum up, ^{world} this problem can ^{be} easily solved by accumulating ~~at~~ resources and desire to help people. It's crucial to understand, that lives of millions are in our hands.
