The lack of food is a serious problem ~~concerning many countries nowadays~~ ~~emerging~~ in many parts of the world nowadays. Currently, the population of the world is growing in a rapid pace and the amount of food produced is not enough to satisfy all the people. There are several reasons for this issue.

Firstly, in modern world, there is a division of countries on developed and developing ones. The latter are countries that once were colonies and served metropolys' necessities. Now they don't have advanced technologies that help developed countries cope with the lack of resources. The solution to this problem is collaboration between these two blocks of countries, so that both of them could benefit.

Secondly, people in many regions suffer from malnutrition because of the inefficient use of natural resources. While in some countries, people waste their food, people in other countries don't get enough of it. The key is to raise the awareness among the consumers about this problem. ~~Also~~ If people didn't waste their food in large amounts, ~~then~~ there would be more resources to supply poor countries with.

The problems concerning the lack of food require a conscious approach.
People should get aware of these issues
and try to contribute to their solution.
These problems can't be solved without the help of the governments. It is crucial to combine the efforts of people and
of countries' heads to achieve a result.
