Recently food waste has become one of the growing ecological concerns. Countries waste tons of edibles monthly and little is done about it. What ~~can~~ action can be taken to tackle this problem?

Firstly, to adress a problem it is necessary to understand its cause. For this issue, I suppose, the main cause is people not being thoughtful when dealing with food. For example, when a person is hungry, they are more likely to buy more food than they actually need, and the leftovers^{are} tend to be thrown away.

Consequently, the crucial measure to be taken is raising awareness among people. Responsible food consumption should be promoted. Moreover, making set portions of food at restaurants and supermarkets smaller can also help to reduce food waste. An unstarted portion is easier to keep for another time, so even if there is more food bought than it is necessary, additional portions are possible to consume later.

To conclude, food waste is an ~~urgent~~ issue that needs to be adresssed as soon as possible,
