Undoubtedly, food shortage is a serious global problem nowadays. It causes millions of deaths and needs to be solved as soon as possible.

As regards the ~~the~~ causes of food shortage, there might be several reasons: bad state of the country, geopolitical problems, such as wars, various ~~at~~ crises. One more important factor, obviously, is natural disasters, such as droughts, floods, earthquakes, which can destroy great amounts of harvests. Sometimes, there are several reasons that might be the cause of food shortage, and government's insufficiency can only make the situation worse.

Speaking of possible solutions to this problem, there are many of them: improving government's policy, asking for help etc. In my opinion, the most effective way to solve this problem efficiently in a scale of the whole planet is to create an international organization, that would include all the countries existing. Having agreed with each other, countries and their representatives would be able to help each other, discuss and solve this problem, and prevent its spreading. One more effective step is to make one ~~inter~~ united supply of ~~food~~ money that countries would be able to use in
