ВАРИАНТ № 1

In our modern world, food deficiency is a big problem. The lack of food resources can be noticed in any part of the world, especially in Africa. To come to a solutions means to analise the causes first.

Food deficiency can be caused by many factors. One of them is food waste. People from around the world tend to throw away surplus edible things, which results in other regions lacking food resources. The second aspect is lack of awareness. Citizens from well-developed countries are not always aware of the hunger in other less-developed nations.

So, what can the society do to improve the situation? Well, firstly governments should organize charities and voluntary projects in order to collect food supplies and raise awareness. Secondly, ecological regulations about food waste should be established and made more strict. Fines should be implemented for ~~a~~ certain amounts of wasted and discarded food supplies that can be considered edible. And lastly, ~~a~~ financial support provided by well-developed countries will assist the poor nations ~~to~~ stabilize their
