ВАРИАНТ № 1

Nowadays in many parts of the world there is not enough food for everyone. And in my opinion it is a really important problem which we need to solve. This problem can include many reasons. For example, the demographic situation which include overpopulation in our planet.

To solve this problem, I can suggest two ways. The first way include an evolution in some countries. For example, countries with traditional type of society can improve their many spheres in high-level and become countries with industrial or postindustrial type of society.

Nowadays postindustrial type of society includes spheres for help to other people and many modern computer technologies and AI. In my opinion, people who work in computer sphere can invent a new type of machines and facilities to grow and make food easier. This way can solve the problem and give more food for everyone.

The second way include the space explorations but I think this way is more difficult to realise than the first. In future constructors will make special buildings in other planets and we could grow our plants in space.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that in future we can solve the problem of not enough food for everyone in many parts of the world.
