ВАРИАНТ № 2

To begin with, waste of food is a serious issue nowadays. People buy more products than they can consume: every household ~~wastes~~ has a lot to do with it. So, what lies underneath everything?

Personally, quite often I face this problem myself. I might buy loads of fruit and it ^{will definitely} get all rotten within a week. Indeed, my eyes are bigger than my stomach. But I never thought of it as of ~~a~~ ^{something} crucial. ~~pro~~ After all, it's my own business. However, if every person makes the same mistake as I do, the issue acquires massive volume: the amounts of products that are thrown out every day are huge.

Actually, the main reasons are the unawareness of the problem and careless attitude. ^{Some} People don't understand the complexity of ~~the~~ ^{the issue,} others resent ^{its} ~~the~~ existence of ~~the issue~~. This should be solved with propaganda in schools, TV and grocery stores: avoid buying more than you ~~could~~ can really consume. Furthermore, shops should create sales like "take me, I'm single" instead of "buy two and get one free". The measures must encourage people to become more rational.

To conclude, the general way to reduce the amount of food thrown away is to raise awareness in our society. We're all part of the problem, but we're also part of the solution.
