ВАРИАНТ № 2

Today the problem of people wasting food is incredibly prominent. There are hundreds of products being thrown out by store owners and customers alike every single day. Just imagine what could have been accomplished with all this precious food if it had not been wasted by ignorant people. One person who imagined that was Selma Juul, who had great influence on her home country of Denmark's food waste reduction.

There is, however, a topic that has not touched upon, at the very least to my knowledge. Why exactly do people feel compelled to waste so much food? How come a civilized society faces such a trivial problem? I have my own thoughts on that question. The problem with people nowadays, especially in first-world countries, do not value their commodities enough. They got accustomed to safe and easy life, compared to other, less fortunate people's lives. The common man today does not feel like food is valuable and important. Of course, groceries do cost money. In this economy, they are quite expensive too. But still, no one sees them as a privilege or some kind of luxury. That kind of ignorance leads to the massive amounts of wasted food we are faced with right now.

But how do we fight this terrible crisis? How do we stop people from wasting food? There is no way to fully eradicate this problem, but there are ways to help it. Firstly, there needs to be a societal change before any government interference. Secondly, after societal change come changes in the way the government treats this problem. This way we can effectively fight this crisis.

16	1) Those who could pay, did. 2) Those who could not brought her butter and cheese, fish, tortillas, eggs, and fiery pepper sauce. 2) Rumor had it the speculator had gone bankrupt and that the doctor had bought the land from him. Some said she had money of her own and would build a great mansion... 3) ...he could hear Mr. Baxter say, "This is just like the fairy stories you used to tell me..."
17	1) Rumor had it the speculator had gone bankrupt and that the doctor had bought the land from him. 2) Some said she had money of her own and would build a great mansion. 1) Their daily routine consisted of Dr Baxter attending to her patients and her daughter going to school. In the evening they would always go to the station. 2) If he stopped believing in it then he would stop believing in the worth of love, hope and faith. 3) ...the thin, haggard man who got off the train. The man was handsome, but gaunt. He walked with the help of a cane.
18	1) The mentioned ranchland was very lucrative. 2) The doctor did her job as the doctor. 3) When it becomes evening, specifically around 5:15. 4) Were not worth anything or just did not matter. 5) Kissing and smelling and other gross stuff.
19	1) see 2) acre 3) jump off 4) exhausted 5) say goodbye
20	I would suggest the title "Patiently waiting". Obviously, the main reason for this is the fact that the story of Doctor Baxter revolves around waiting for her husband. Besides, that title also involves a little bit of wordplay which is always great. "Patience" sounds like "patients" and Doctor Baxter is... well, a doctor.
