ВАРИАНТ № 1

Nowadays, the lack of food is a large problem worldwide. A lot of people in almost every corner of the world are starving, while in the developed parts of the world people waste food without understanding that this food may be vital for other people and even can save someones life.

I think that the reason of the lack of food is that the countries don't have good conditions to grow food or they just don't have enough money to buy this food from another countries. Often, we can see the absence of food in poor countries. That is because poor countries usually have a lot of people living there, what makes it harder to provide enough food for everyone.

In my opinion, such countries should organize the producement of goods. They should make it more structurized and in some way government should take it under their control, because it is not too late to change the situation. Also, if the situation is out of control, government can borrow money from other countries to buy enough food. It is very radical solution, but it is all what is left in this conditions. Developed countries should not forget that they can help too. People can donate money on charities to help poor people.
