ВАРИАНТ № 1

I was asked about how since there is not enough food for everyone in many parts of the world, what do I think can cause this and what solutions can I suggest. Let us get right into it.

It is no secret how world hunger is one of the most serious problems modern society faces, ~~but not many speak of about it, or think about it often~~. World hunger came with, in my opinion, the division of ~~people~~ people, also regarded as social layers. Even in earlier times, there always were the royal (or rich) and the poor. ~~Often times, those with money~~ ^{are not obliged} ~~don't have to work a lot, resulting in hiring people to do the job for them, and~~. It goes without saying that those with money have the advantage when it comes to most things, including food. Food is not an infinite source, not only in the sense of Mother Earth giving us fruit, meat, vegetables and so forth, but also considering how we have to cook most food for it to be ready (and safe) for consumption. Getting food costs money, cooking takes time, and some people might have neither.

I believe that the easiest solution to world hunger would be to build communities that help those in need, and have governments support them.

In conclusion, lack of food for everyone could have been caused by social layers and to end world hunger we should create communities that will help with food shortage by volunteering and donations.
