ВАРИАНТ № 1

Unfortunately, as the population grows, the problem of lack of food stays relevant. Many countries are struggling to cope with food waste and loss and failing to overcome complicated situation with distribution of food and supplies. Unreasonable consumption, marketing strategies aimed only to receive great income and lack of attention to literal social policy are the main reasons why in many countries people face famine.

I am sure that governments have to make ultimate moves to overcome tensivity in this social sphere. Firstly, they could establish different social programmes that would help people ~~to~~ who have no opportunity to properly feed themselves and their families properly. Secondly, ~~economice~~ ^{economic} issues and tendations are ~~at~~ to receive serious consideration because without thinking about how to increase people's ability to buy everything that is needed, it is unfeasible to succeed in solving food problems.

Activists who care about other citizens also can make the difference. There should be more movements and communities that would unite those who want to make their contribution in getting through famine, food waste and loss. They could raise people's awareness of reasonable consumption and what to do to reduce food waste.

It is essential to remember that indifference and absence of desire to help each other prevent people from solving food problems.
