ВАРИАНТ № 1

In my opinion, economical differences between South and North of the world are the main cause of food shortage in many parts of the world. Countries of Europe have a lot of financial resources, while less possibilities are available in Africa and South Asia. People from these countries sometimes simply can not afford buying food. Also, a great amount of people migrate annually from less prosperous parts of the world, leaving their homes, which causes lack of workers and influences badly on food production in those countries. Besides, poor governmental management is one of the reasons of world famine. Some countries can not properly work with the resources that they have, which leads to small food production, causing food shortage. Another reason why people might be affected by the lack of food is that they do not know how to work on fields and grow food.

~~There are many~~

There are many ideas on how to solve this problem. I suggest, that all countries should unite in one organisation. By doing so, rich countries would be able to help less developed ones by sending food, volunteers or agricultural machines. Another solution to this matter is to educate people who ~~suffer~~ suffer from famine how to cultivate their own crops, which will positively affect on food shortage in poor countries.
