ВАРИАНТ № 2

Nowadays, people waste a lot of food that they buy from shops and restaurants. But why is that?

The main reason for the high amount of food being wasted is poor planning. People buy food that they won't use believing that they will. This food stays uneaten and forgotten in fridges, cupboards and shelves, until its owner finds it while cooking or cleaning and discovers that it's already gone bad.

~~[The only thing that can be done]~~ Of course, to avoid this, one must plan better. But what exactly does this mean? First of all, when buying something, make sure that you know you want it. If you only want to eat something occasionally, you ~~[will likely forget about]~~ are unlikely to use all of it before the expiration date. Second of all, only buy as much as you need. Remember that you can always buy more later, so make sure that if the amount you bought isn't the exact same as how much you eat, then it's covered. Finally, plan your cooking ahead. Write down what you plan on cooking each week, and only buy as much as you need for that.

In conclusion, planning is crucial to reducing food waste; always plan ahead and only buy as much as you need.
