ВАРИАНТ № 1

There are many problems that our planet faces nowadays, for example global warming, racism, terrorism and moreover hunger. Poor southern regions, especially Africa, has been dealing with hunger for many years. Hunger and lack of food could arise due to country's poverty and climate, in which most of plants can't grow properly to provide all people's living there. But let's put aside the climate, those poor regions have been in political control of other great countries, which has lead to political issues. It's well known that economics in this region is known as a traditional one. As was mentioned before, most of these countries are poor and are in addition what means that it's really hard to not only buy food abroad, but to distribute it fairly and properly to make all residents happy and fed. I'm neither a politician, nor a professional in solving these kinds of problems, but in my opinion in order to solve this problem I'd advice to deal with social issues at first. The second step would be finding the most "successful" spots and improve their positions, for example if a country is a main rice or corn producing one, then it should ~~be~~ improve their technologies in this particular sphere and go on international market to earn money.

In conclusion, those terrific problems shouldn't be solved by one country or state only, but to be a crucial reminder for the whole mankind to help each other.

20	In my opinion, I'd call this story a "Double life" because it tells us about a woman that is nursing a wealthy lady in her villa on some paradise island where is she is staying due to her disease. Rebecca, the main character, has to do her work 24/7 but on the other hand, she has free will to do whatever she wants while her mistress doesn't need her
